America's First Official Thanksgiving

Fourth grade pupils of Mrs. Cecil Houchins have drawn and illustrated their ideas about America's first official Thanksgiving. The entire back wall of the classroom at Appomattox Primary School is devoted to a painting of Captain John Woodlief and a small band of English settlers at Berkley on the James River in 1619. Using "bits of nature, strings and things, this is what we think it must have looked like in 1619 when Captain John Woodlief arrived with written instructions to give thanks and 'yearly and perpetually keep holy a day of Thanksgiving to Almighty God,' ", the children have explained in a printed sheet given to parents and other visitors to Mrs. Houchin's room. Continuing, the paper says, "Here (at Berkley - a cross was planted in 1619 carrying out orders from the King of England. The Ship 'Margaret' sailed from Bristol, England to found the settlement of Berkely Hundred in the Colony of Virginia." Records show that 35 persons made the trip successfully.

Taking part in the project were Carmella Barnes, Margaretta Franklin, Linda Kaye Kedd, Theodore Faye McCormick, Rebecca Ann Moss, Velma Mae Pankey, Otis Edward Goin, Arthur Haskins, Dave Hubbard, Nathaniel Jones, Richard Keeler, Lawrence Louis, David Litchford, Floyd McCormick, Myron McCoy, Richard Marcus, Randolph Moore, Clifton Mosley, Otis Mosley, Clarence Rosser, Michael Carter. Economic Study Presented To Appomattox County

Otho W. Martin, Jr., left, chairman of Appomattox County Board of Supervisors, receives copy of book, "Appomattox County, Va., An Economic Study" from Kenneth W. Lane of Richmond, manager Community Development Virginia Electric and Power Company. At right is Joe E. Savely of Roanoke, director of industrial development, Norfolk and Western Railway, Roanoke, featured speaker at Wednesday night's dinner meeting at the Parkway.

Vepco - N&W Officials Speak

The presentation of a 96-page economic study of Appomattox County was made to the county Wednesday night, November 25, by Kenneth W. Lane, manager, Richmond during a dinner meeting at the Parkway Restaurant. Featured speaker of the evening was Joe E. Saveley, director of industrial development, Norfolk and Western Railway, Roanoke.

Presiding at the dinner was J. A. Smith, president of Appomattox Development Corp. He said that the study presentation is a "significant event in the growth of Appomattox County." He said that the presentation is "without cost" to the county but that if Appomattox were to employ a consulting firm to work with Virginia Electric and Power Company on such a project costs would run as high as $25,000 or higher.

Approximately 60 county and town officials and leaders were present at the dinner plus officials of Virginia Electric and Power Company and the Norfolk and Western Railway. At the head table were C. S. Betts, vice president of Vepco, Joe E. Savely, of Roanoke, Director of Industrial Development, N&W; Kenneth W. Lane of Richmond, Community Development, Vepco; Otho W. Martin, Jr. of Oakville, chairman, Appomattox county board of supervisors and Chrles E. Hunter, Jr., manager, Industrial Development, N&W.

In his introduction of the speaker, Joe E. Saveley, Kenneth Lane gave credit to many of the special guests, including George DeLo, Richmond, Director of Community Development, Governor's Office, Div. of Industrial Development, for his considerable efforts in helping Appomattox organize its industrial development corporation.

Lane announced that 325 copies of the economic study are available plus 500 copies of an Economic Data summary for mailing.

The economic study is designed as a reference for industrial development organizations to assist industry in new plant locations and expansion of existing plants, Lane said other possible uses of the study are 1. To assist a community to evaluate its shortcomings and assets. 2. To serve as a basis of long range planning for the community. 3. To assist in preparing individual community development plans. 4. Most important, to be used as a fact book and community work book with industrial prospects.

The eleven sites range in size from nine to 930 acres and in most cases, the size of the particular site can be increased or decreased to meet specific requirements.

The study is divided into six major classifications -physical assets, manpower, market resources, government, community facilities and industrial sites.

Six of the sites are adjacent to railway facilities and all are served by good highways. Each site is illustrated by a topographic presentation and brief description of the property.

The study was made at the request of the Appomattox County Board of Supervisors and with the cooperation with the citizens of the county.

The economic survey is based on information supplied through a local study committee headed by James A. Smith, of Appomattox. Other committee members include Otho W. Martin, Jr., Carter Martin, William Dudley and C. S. Booth.

Project engineer for the study was L. Stephen Stupasky, of Richmond. Sponsors for the dinner were Farmers National Bank of Farmville, Pamplin Branch, Elliott Florist provided the head table flower arrangement and the TIMES-VIRGINIAN printed the dinner invitations.
